Who is the HoneyNet Project?

- The HoneyNet Project is an non-profit computer security research organization
- Founded in 2000 by Lance Spitzner
- Global membership of volunteers with diverse skills and experiences
- We are not selling our products or services. All we produce is open source and freely available
- The HoneyNet Project is a platform that brings together security researchers and likeminded people to accomplish this goal

Our Mission

To learn the tools, tactics and motives involved in computer and network attacks, and share the lessons learned.

Our Vision

The Honeynet Project is a diverse, talented, and engaged group of international computer security experts who conduct open, cross disciplinary research and development into the evolving threat landscape. It cooperates with like-minded people and organizations in that endeavor.

What do we do?

Awareness: Raise awareness of the threats that exist

Information: For those already aware, teach and inform about latest threats

Research: Give organizations the capabilities to learn more on their own

The HoneyNet Project

- Nearly 400 Contributors (49 Full Members)
- 52 Chapters in 42 countries
- Chapters in the following continents
 - North America
 - South America
 - Europe
 - Africa
 - Asia
 - Australia

Only missing the continent of Antarctica

2014 HoneyNet Project Workshop

- The 2014 HoneyNet Project Workshop is organized by the HoneyNet Project and coordinating with CERT Polska under NASK
- The workshop is an event to bring together top information security experts from around the globe to present their research efforts as well as discuss insights and strategies to combat new emerging threats through briefing sessions along with live demonstrations and hands-on training in state-of-the-art tools and techniques
- 236 attendees including 24 speakers
